

FESTIVALS

MARKETS

EXHIBITIONS

GATHERINGS

PERFORMANCES

CINEMA

WORKSHOPS

CREATIVE SPACES

Approach view of the pavilion entrance

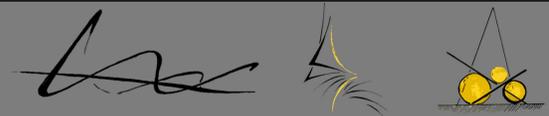

View of the stage from the north facade

View of the rooftop amphitheatre

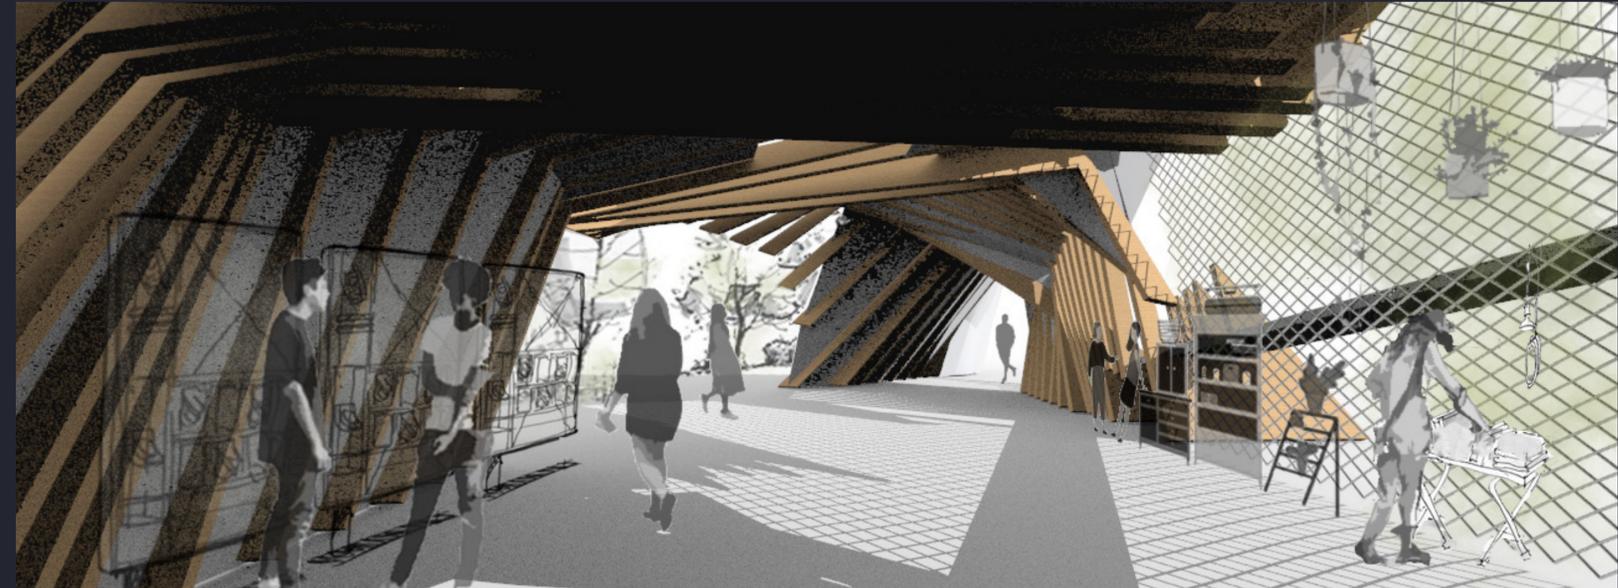

South Elevation

TOTTENHAM PAVILION

POLINA PASHONINA

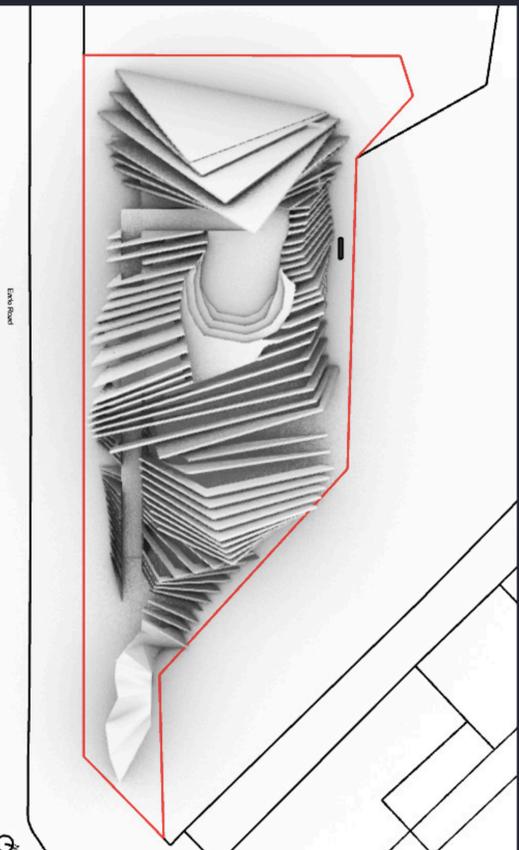

The pavilion reflects the powerful, creativity-driven dynamic of the community using form, materials and colour, creating a multifunctional space tailored to the needs of the locals who wish to create, showcase or admire forms of art and craft. The form is created with a series of slanted timber portal frames that parametrically vary in shape and height based on the spaces inside. The pavilion is based around a main, 5 m tall space within which artists and craftsmen are set up along the perimeters. A metal mesh spans the open areas on the south-facing facade and is used to hang plants, art works and other crafts. To the north of the main space is a more secluded space that opens up to the green area. Shielded from the eyes and sounds of the road, the diffused light, a fresh cross breeze and a beautiful natural backdrop create a perfect space for painting, sculptural and craft workshops. To the south of the central space is the stage. To accentuate the uniqueness of the district a bright yellow ramp is embedded into the form of the south facade that brings the visitors up to the roof of the pavilion. A play with the form of the portal frames creates an exaggerated sense of perspective. At the top, in the amphitheatre, visitors can have meetings, enjoy a yoga class, a movie or simply watch the sunset. All the spaces are multifunctional, and can be modified by the local community to further tailor the spaces to various uses.

Internal view of the market area from the stage

Sketch perspectives

Plan view