

Open Up Pavilion

The pavilion tries to bring the community together in the center of the market. In connection to the district, the pavilion opens up its sloped roof to open up towards the community. The center opens towards the entrance inviting visitors inside the heart of the market. On both sides there are the display area and upstairs there is the workshop area. On the ground level there can also be a cafe at the end of the inner garden to guide people towards sitting together.

The pavilion takes the shape of the neighbouring house, with the sloped roof, but open it up so that the whole building opens up as well. Large windows allow visitors to see what is happening outside and inside, inviting them to take part.

In a district of a unique dynamic, the pavilion follows as well. Its open attributes invite the lively district to take up the space inside as well.
